

Learning from the mistakes of the past, the United States accepted its role as a world superpower, helping to rebuild Europe and Japan and taking the leading role in establishing the United Nations.

Establishment of the United Nations

The United Nations was formed near the end of World War II to create a body for the nations of the world to try to prevent future wars.

The student will demonstrate knowledge of the economic, social, and political transformation of the United States and the world between the end of World War II and the present by:

- describing the rebuilding of Europe and Japan after World War II, the emergence of the United States as a superpower, and the establishment of the United States.
